Session .02

Empowered by the Holy Spirit

Scripture

Acts 3:1-7,11-20

1 Now Peter and John were going up to the temple for the time of prayer at three in the afternoon. 2 A man who was lame from birth was being carried there. He was placed each day at the temple gate called Beautiful, so that he could beg from those entering the temple. 3 When he saw Peter and John about to enter the temple, he asked for money. 4 Peter, along with John, looked straight at him and said, “Look at us.” 5 So he turned to them, expecting to get something from them. 6 But Peter said, “I don’t have silver or gold, but what I do have, I give you: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, get up and walk!” 7 Then, taking him by the right hand he raised him up, and at once his feet and ankles became strong. . . . 11 While he was holding on to Peter and John, all the people, utterly astonished, ran toward them in what is called Solomon’s Colonnade. 12 When Peter saw this, he addressed the people: “Fellow Israelites, why are you amazed at this? Why do you stare at us, as though we had made him walk by our own power or godliness? 13 The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our ancestors, has glorified his servant Jesus, whom you handed over and denied before Pilate, though he had decided to release him. 14 You denied the Holy and Righteous One and asked to have a murderer released to you. 15 You killed the source of life, whom God raised from the dead; we are witnesses of this. 16 By faith in his name, his name has made this man strong, whom you see and know. So the faith that comes through Jesus has given him this perfect health in front of all of you. 17 “And now, brothers and sisters, I know that you acted in ignorance, just as your leaders also did. 18 In this way God fulfilled what he had predicted through all the prophets—that his Messiah would suffer. 19 Therefore repent and turn back, so that your sins may be wiped out, 20 that seasons of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, and that he may send Jesus, who has been appointed for you as the Messiah.

Option 1

Your students have been enlisted by a local English Language Learners school for help. They are trying to teach American English idioms to their students. One of the expressions is, “I’ll do you one better.” I’ll do you one better means you’re going to do something even better for someone than he or she originally asked; for instance, someone might ask to try your ice cream, but you say, “I’ll do you one better!” and buy the person his or her own bowl.

Your students’ job is to create a short skit simply demonstrating the concept of “I’ll do you one better.” At some point in the skit, someone needs to say, “I’ll do you one better.” Let them prepare and then show their skits (if some students would prefer to create a comic strip, allow them to do so).

Segue into the lesson by telling students today’s story involves a “I’ll do you one better” incident; a man who was lame will ask Peter and John for money, but they will “do him one better” by healing him in the name of Jesus.

Option 2

Your students should get into small groups to put together skits. They will all start with the same premise: three guys (or three girls, or some combination) somehow run into a genie. The genie is not the world’s most powerful genie; he can only grant each of them one wish, but when he grants them a wish, he must also take something away. The first person requests to be the world’s most eloquent speaker; he or she wants a tongue that would put Shakespeare to shame. The genie grants the wish, but he takes away the person’s physical strength; the person is superbly eloquent, but is incapable of almost any physical exertion and is largely invalid. The second person requests to be the world’s strongest and most flexible person; he or she can do almost anything humanly possible. However, the genie takes away the person’s ability to talk; he or she is super strong, but now mute. Finally, the third person declines his or her opportunity for a wish; he or she would rather stay as he or she is.

Your students’ job is to create a “life in the day of” skit for each of the three characters. They can come up with original settings to make it more fun. Let them prepare and show their skits. Discuss how each character’s lives were different. Ask them which of the three people they would choose to be. Segue into the lesson by explaining that in today’s lesson, we’ll see that the Holy Spirit empowers us both to speak and to act in the name of Jesus Messiah. Peter and John do a miracle, and they use that miracle to expound on the excellence of Jesus. In the same way, we should have both (like the third person) Spirit-empowered words and Spirit-empowered actions in our witness.

TEACHING PLAN

Read Acts 3:1-7.

There have likely been times when we have forgotten the Holy Spirit's power, and instead of relying on Him, we lived as though we had to carry all the weight by ourselves. But Scripture tells us we can't:

- Life is more than we can handle on our own.
- We're inadequate to save ourselves.
- We could never carry out Jesus' mission on our own.
- This is why He gives us the Holy Spirit!

Imagine being like this man born unable to walk. His whole life, he lay on the ground and begged passersby to share. This man certainly experienced physical suffering and felt the ridicule of those who saw him as worthless. But worse, there was a sense of spiritual shame.

When Peter and John walked by, they didn't have any money, but they claimed to have something even better. Surely the man who was crippled was skeptical. But when he was healed, he knew that they had spoken the truth—not only in regard to his legs, but also his heart. As this man entered the temple, leaping and praising God, people recognized him and were amazed.

This passage is incredibly encouraging, specifically that, by the power of the Spirit, Jesus' work continues through His disciples. We may be tempted to see a story like this and wish we could do exactly the same things. Often if we don't see miraculous results every time we share the gospel, we are prone to be discouraged. But we don't produce results. God does! We're simply called to follow His call on our lives—sharing the gospel and showing real love. When we do this, we'll often see the Spirit impact others in real ways.

- When have you been discouraged or frustrated because you shared the gospel or prayed for someone, but didn't see immediate results?
- How does the Spirit work through Jesus' disciples today?

99 Essential Doctrines (p. 16, DDG)

Inspiration of Scripture

The inspiration of Scripture refers to God's direction of the human authors of the Bible so that they composed and recorded His message to humankind in their original writings (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:19-21). Occasionally this inspiration was achieved through dictation, where God spoke directly to the original authors. Most of the time, however, this inspiration was achieved through the supernatural influence of the Holy Spirit through the personalities of the authors so that their writings can be considered the very words of God.

COMMENTARY

Main Point:
We are called to meet people's earthly and spiritual needs.

Read Acts 3.

“The healing of the crippled beggar offered confirmation of the truth of the gospel that the apostles were preaching. It is thus not surprising that it generated opposition from the religious authorities. The crippled man was one of the lowest of the have-nots in that society, unable to work for a living and only able to beg for money from people like Peter and John, who were coming to worship at the temple. These men who received power from God never used that power as if it were their own but referred the power to God from whom they received it; for the power itself could never have any force except through the name of Him who gave it. And so both the apostles and all the servants of God never did anything in their own name, but in the name of Jesus.”¹

3:3 “Peter and John had recently been involved in an evangelistic effort which brought thousands to Christ. Now God tells them, this one lost sheep is just as important to him as the thousands to whom they preached at Pentecost.”²

In Defense (p. 18, DDG)

Many Christians would claim that it is our responsibility to focus on the spiritual needs of our non-believing neighbors—and they are right. However, at times, we may become imbalanced in our views concerning meeting physical and spiritual needs. Some Christians devote so much of their energies to meeting physical needs that they never get around to sharing the gospel, and though they serve others in practical ways, they never address their greatest need of the gospel. Others focus so heavily on the spiritual needs of others, they come across as lacking compassion and being unconcerned with the real-life challenges people face every day. The truth is that God is grieved over all the effects of sin, including the suffering people face in the here-and-now. He desires to use the church to minister to people's real needs. He is also—and ultimately—concerned with people's being relationally separated from Him because of our sin, and calls us to preach the gospel to all. We must follow Peter's and John's example of, from a heart of love and compassion, meeting others' practical needs while, with patience and grace, taking advantage of opportunities to leverage that rapport for sharing the gospel.

TEACHING PLAN

Read Acts 3:11-16.

Those who saw the man leaping and praising God were blown away, but Peter and John made it clear that the crowd shouldn't be amazed at them. Rather, it was the power of God working through them that healed the crippled man.

When we share the gospel, when we serve our neighbors, or when we see years of prayers answered, we should never take the credit for the results. We simply rejoice in the name of Jesus. Just like Peter and John, we should refuse to take credit, instead we must glorify the only One whose name has the power to save (Acts 4:12-14).

We may be tempted to question ourselves: "Do I know the Bible well enough to share the gospel? Is my heart even in the right place?" There's good news! Though we're called to a high standard which we can never fulfill on earth, Christ has taken this burden off of us. He obeyed perfectly, and when we call on Jesus' name, we know that the Spirit works through us to accomplish Jesus' mission.

God's mission doesn't happen by accident—we must choose to engage. He doesn't want us to try to earn salvation, but he does expect us to take up our cross and follow Jesus. Through the grace He extends, we bear Jesus' name and pursue His mission. All the glory belongs to Him.

- In what ways might you take the credit for God's work in your life and the lives of others? How can you glorify Jesus instead?

Read Acts 3:17-20.

Jesus aimed His sharpest critiques at the Jewish religious leaders—they had access to the Scriptures, they were the experts, and they should have recognized the promised Messiah who fulfilled the Scriptures. Jesus had asked them, "If you know the Scriptures, why don't you realize who I am?" (Luke 24:25-27). Peter repeatedly made this point. If we understand God and His Word, then we will accept Jesus. The Jewish religious leaders knew the Scriptures, but it didn't translate into their loving God and receiving Christ.

God doesn't simply want us to know the Bible and have good theology. He wants us to love Him in a way that leads to obedience, which involves our carrying the gospel to all people. It's not about debating others' theology—we can't call others to repent and believe in Jesus while we're arguing with them. Of course, there are times where defending the faith is appropriate, but ultimately we say with Peter, "Repent and find refreshment in Christ."

Theology is about love—of God and others. As God's people—empowered by the Spirit to know Him and speak the truth—we are equipped to call others to repentance, pointing them not to ourselves, but to the true source of life.

- How does your knowledge of the Scripture lead you to love God and others?
- How does your love for others translate in your sharing the gospel with them?

COMMENTARY

Main Point:
We are called to meet people's earthly and spiritual needs.

Acts 3

“The power of Jesus Christ creates such amazement that it requires an explanation. This mirrors Jesus’ own pattern, as He often followed miraculous healings with teachings on the nature of the kingdom of God. The miracles in Scripture should be seen not so much as models that we should seek to repeat but as evidence of divine authority for God’s special messengers. As people marvel at the power of the apostles, Peter immediately renounces self-centered praise and redirects their gaze to Jesus Christ. Everything is about Jesus, whom God has glorified (v. 13) by raising Him from the dead.”³ “All they had to do to avail themselves of this salvation was to change their former attitude to Jesus and bring it into line with God’s attitude. God had clearly declared his verdict by raising Him from the dead. Let them therefore repent and let them turn back in heart to God, and the salvation and blessing procured by their Messiah’s death would be theirs.”⁴

3:19-20 “A comparison with Peter’s promises in 2:38 suggests that the Holy Spirit is the One who brings this refreshment. Peter may be describing the subjective effect of the gift of the Spirit for believers, whose presence anticipates and guarantees the full inheritance God promises his children.”⁵

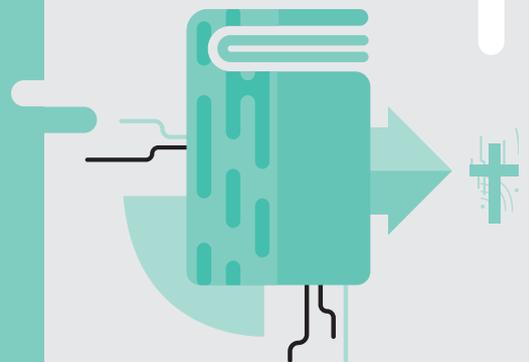

Activity

Your students should pretend they’ve been hired to create an advertising campaign calling people to repent. Students may create any idea for advertisements they can come up with. The campaign is “Repentance for Refreshing.” Their advertisements should communicate the idea that Jesus offers something better than anything the world can offer, and the way to Jesus is through repentance, which leads to refreshing. Whatever they do, they should advertise the superiority of Jesus over the world and the refreshment that comes from repentance.

Let them prepare and then share their advertisements. Discuss how they can take these perhaps-cheesy ideas and share and show them in real life. Their advertisements covered the first and third point of the lesson, but when we live out and declare joy in Jesus and refreshment from repentance, we accomplish the second point of the lesson: giving glory and praise to Jesus.

(p. 17, DDG) Christ Connection

Once the Holy Spirit was given, the disciples began boldly proclaiming Jesus as Lord and Savior. The Holy Spirit displayed the power of God’s kingdom through the miracles the disciples performed in Jesus’ name for His glory and praise.

Our Mission

God's Story has always been designed to connect with our story. It is because of His Story that our stories make sense, have meaning, and carry on into eternity. Use the questions below to help think through how His Story connects with your own. Suggested answers to these questions can be found on the right-hand side of the page for leaders.

Head

Why is it so important that we have right theological understanding?

How can we make sure we don't, like the Pharisees, know the Scriptures but miss Jesus?

Heart

How can we make sure that our understanding of Scripture translates into love?

How does love for God and others impact our call to carry the gospel to all people?

Hands

What are specific ways we are called to meet the physical needs of others?

How can we use acts of service to help people understand the gospel?

Main Point: We are called to meet people's earthly and spiritual needs.

Head

The Pharisees were continually looking for ways to trip up Jesus. They were experts in the law, and they were confident in their standing not only in Jewish society, but before God Himself. However, though they knew the Scriptures forward and backward, the Pharisees had missed they were about Jesus. Peter and John, on the other hand, had been transformed by the power of the Spirit, and their theological knowledge translated into their serving the man who was crippled and telling the truth about Jesus to those who would listen.

We need to devote ourselves to understanding the Scriptures. Further, we need to evaluate ourselves honestly, making sure that our knowledge isn't causing us to be prideful. Instead, when we see God and ourselves, we will be moved to humility.

Heart

The Holy Spirit works in our hearts to help us not only to live in obedience to God's commands, but to fulfill the greatest commandments of loving God and loving people with all we are. Whereas knowledge of the Bible may tempt us to be puffed up (1 Cor. 8:1), when the Holy Spirit helps us understand the true meaning of the Scriptures, we are moved to humility as opposed to pride. A right and humble understanding of the Scriptures keeps us from seeking to build ourselves up, instead building up and blessing others so that they would know the goodness of God. Peter and John refused to accept any credit for their healing of the man—this was because they loved God and others even more than they loved themselves. When we understand and experience the love of Jesus for us—that He laid down His life for us even though we were His enemies—it changes the ways we view our relationship with Him as well as our relationships with others. We simply cannot be selfish after experiencing the transforming power of the goodness of God. Let's make sure we're living selflessly and generously so that others might know of His goodness.

Hands

Peter and John healed the crippled man of his physical problems as an expression of their (and Jesus') genuine care for him. All pain and suffering in this life is a consequence of sin's curse, and it grieves God. Therefore, we should make efforts to relieve pain and suffering through providing for real needs. However, this wasn't the end of the matter in the disciples' minds. They used the healing to direct people's attention to the greater, spiritual need—then they shared the gospel. We were all once like the man who was crippled—broken and hopeless apart from Jesus' intervening in our lives. Now, like Peter and John, we are called to serve others in real ways, using our gifts, times, talents, and resources to bless and encourage them. Further, we're to tell how Jesus has impacted our lives, declaring the hope of the gospel.
